The purpose of this investigation was to determine whether the incomplete tolerance of newborn rats to the inhalation of xylol, toluol or xylene and its mixtures found in automotive engine rooms and laboratories is an experimental artefact. For this purpose, rats were exposed to 35-100 parts per million of toluene, 85-215 parts per million of xylenes or 120-340 parts per million of toluol in air through an inhalatory exposure system for five consecutive weeks. The animals tolerated this exposure better than was expected and their hepatic ethoxyresorufin-O-deethylase activity was lower (P Sensational Fashion: Smokey Eye “Throughout the ages, the eyes have been the windows of our soul” — Jacques-Louis David The smoldering eyes of a fashion-forward beauty have long been the bringer of attention and intrigue to the fashionista’s eye.
