Q: Solr query for match ngram between a set of strings I have the following data in my DB, for example: Adjectives_India: This is an adjective of India. Adjectives_UK: This is an adjective of United Kingdom. Adjectives_USA: This is an adjective of United States. I would like to get results where i can get the overall popularity of India, UK, US based on the data above. I'm NOT trying to get occurrences of each word in each document. I just want to get the overall popularity of each country with respect to its adjectives(if that makes sense). So can someone please help me figure out the query I should be using for this? I tried using capitalization filter does not seem to work. Also tried ngram searches, didn't work! Thanks in advance. A: I found this to be a very interesting question. My answer is completely intuitive and I hope it solves your problem. Let me first explain the problem I think you are trying to solve. Lets take for example Adjectives_UK. In Adjectives_UK, it represents adjective in UK. Consider these adjectives in an order you are seaching for popularity: Cool Great Smashing Also, consider that these are adjectives in the positive side. Now consider these Replayability: 5/5 Visually it was really well done, with hand-drawn characters, unique characters, and nice backgrounds. Game design is interesting, and the world was interesting. Aesthetics: 5/5 The card battle system was fun and entertaining. There's also a lot to do in both short term and long term. Fun Factor: 5/5 It's a classic RPG and it definitely has some good points. It's got that new-game-feeling that I haven't quite had since the original Final Fantasy. Potential: 5/5 I'm definitely very interested to see where it goes, and how they are going to approach the story.
